ANDRUW JONES --- A winner of ten consecutive gold gloves, ten straight 20-homer seasons, and a 2005 Silver Slugger Award, Andruw Jones is one of the great all-around players of his generation. Inserted as a regular his rookie year in 1996, Jones made his Major League debut as just a 19-year-old, and helped the Braves win a second consecutive NL pennant. Over an accomplished 17-year big league career, Andruw Jones collected over 1,900 hits and slugged 434 home runs while batting .254/.337/.486 with 152 stolen bases. Jones had his best season as a pro in 2005 when he hit .263 with 51 homers that led all of baseball and 128 RBI to earn the Hank Aaron Award as the National League's top hitter, Silver Slugger accolades, and a second-place finish in the NL MVP race. "The Curacao Kid" spent 12 years with Atlanta after signing as an international free agent at age 16 with the Braves out of Willemstad, Curacao in 1993, and finished his career in pinstripes over two seasons with the Yankees.
